Clinical Interests and Experience

I have a rich clinical experience history working with a multitude of different populations in a variety of settings, as well as providing supervision. I have experience providing group counseling to children, individuals in substance abuse treatment, and the geriatric population. Additionally, I have a host of experiences with many populations, social groups, and multicultural counseling. I have provided counseling throughout rural Appalachia in West Virginia and Tennessee, as well as urban centers, such as a high acuity emergency room just outside of Washington DC, and working with a large refugee and homeless population and serious mental illnesses. I have provided mental health services in a rural farm and military community for the last few years. Additionally, while I have not functioned as a school counselor, I have provided therapeutic services in the school setting and training and consultations to school counselors.

Research Experience

Dissertation:

I am currently a doctoral candidate conducting a grounded theory dissertation study on urban nature-based mental health professionals' views on ecological justice. Time spent in nature is a well-documented part of wellness. The American Counseling Association's Code of Ethics (2014) also calls for counselors to be advocates, and many nature-based professional organizations promote care for the land and environment. However, no known research examines these professionals' experiences and views related to ecological justice or equitable access to nature.

Previous Research:

Academic Research conducted while attending Swansea University, Wales, UK at the University of Central Oklahoma, Edmond, OK. Advisors: Helen Lewis, Ph.D., Janet Goodall, Ph.D. Research related to the increase in Outdoor Education programs during COVID-19 and potential benefits. Oct 2020- Oct 2021.

Graduate Research Assistant to Ruth Lui, Ed.D.; Director of Institutional Research and Planning at Southern Adventist University, Collegedale, TN. Assisted in research interviews of college freshmen, examining college retention programs. Jan – May 2002.
